Director of Personnel
Central Intelligence Agency

Dear Sir or Madam:

I want a job working with CIA operatives in the development of cover stories and new identities and eventually want to become an agent in the field in the U.S. or overseas.

I understand the potentials of the job I am applying for and the possible dangers involved. I am fully prepared and committed to give whatever it takes to achieve my goals.

My background includes college (BA plus 2 years) with emphasis in the physical sciences, English and psychology. I have a strong theatre background in costuming, make-up, directing and role playing. Other job experience has shown I am a risk-taker, very self-confident, forward and articulate. I plan well, am persistent and notice details. I am a very fast reader, extremely observant, analytical, deductive and am strongly intuitive. I have a fantastic memory and a good ear for American and British regional accents. I do library research with great zeal and find it amazingly easy to get answers to anything else with a few phone calls.

My high energy, strong stamina, and good physical condition would make me able to handle any kind of training. I have strong control, have learned to deal with pain and sorrow; I don't let emotional attachments get too deep. I am cool, calm and logical in emergencies. I get along well with all kinds of people; no one is a stranger to me. I'm also an excellent driver with over 265,000 miles and no accidents.

I am available immediately. From everything I've learned, I know applicants are researched thoroughly and take extensive polygraph tests. I am ready to get started!

Sincerely,
